

Council Okays Some of Pepco's Plans; Still Reviewing Others

by James Giese

Progress apparently is being made to resolve the extent of tree trimming and removal to be undertaken this fall and winter within the city by the Potomac Electric Power Company (Pepco) under and alongside its power lines – but not as fast as Pepco would like. Pepco had submitted seven plans detailing work to be done and identifying trees over four-inch caliper that would be affected. City staff has recommended approval of the work in five of the plans, while resolution of the others, which are more controversial, is in progress.

These five plans were reviewed by the Greenbelt City Council at its September 2 work-session and will probably be approved at the council's September 16 regular meeting. However, Jerry Pasternak, a Pepco vice-president, noted that most of the tree work was to take place on the two plans still unresolved and urged quick resolution so that work could be scheduled for this year.

The five plans recommended by staff for approval are:

Plan 15738: To remove along Greenbelt Road seven trees adjacent to Greenwood Village with tree replacement and one tree at the entrance to Lakecrest Drive.

Plan 15739: To trim and prune trees on Hanover Parkway, Greenway Center Drive, Hanover Drive and Greenbelt Road.

Plan 15740: To remove seven trees on Southway, mostly in the vicinity of the off-ramp from the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and two trees on city property adjacent to the entrance to the Hanover Apartments

Plan 15744: To remove 12 Bradford pears and one red oak on Edmonston Road at the Franklin Park Apartments.

Plan 34021/28: To do work along the Pepco easement between Windsor Green and Doctor's Hospital.

City Council Receives Presentation On Economic Development Proposal

by Kathleen Gallagher

On August 26, the Greenbelt City Council met to receive a presentation by Stuart Eisenberg, executive director, and Molly O'Connell, program manager, of the Hyattsville Community Development Corporation (HCDC). Based in Hyattsville and active with the Gateway Arts District, HCDC for the last five years has also worked more broadly with Prince George's County and with other Inner Beltway communities and collaborative groups.

This meeting was a follow-up to a previous worksession on June 24, which was reported in detail in the July 9 issue of this paper. At the first meeting, the goal was to discuss the work of HCDC to see whether it or a similar organization might aid the city in determining its next steps in defining an economic development program.

Last year, the city contracted for a report from Sage Policy Group that provided analysis and recommendations for an economic development strategy for the city. Mayor Emmett Jordan explained that while councilmembers believed that work to be valuable as an overall analysis, they found they still needed more specifics on determining priorities and setting out the sequence of steps that needed to be taken. Jordan described the HCDC proposal as "very pragmatic" in what it presents.

Solange T. Hess Is 2015 Outstanding Citizen

by Gabriela Martinez

"I suppose you expect our outstanding citizen to be someone outspoken, high-profile, a prominent leader, right?" asked Robert Zugby at the Labor Day Festival Opening Ceremony, in a preamble to this year's Outstanding Citizen announcement.

"Wrong. Our outstanding citizen is quiet, unassuming, even humble."

People were eagerly trying to find Solange T. Hess in the crowd as soon as she was called to the stage.

"Solange, I know you are down there. You're behind someone who is taller than you are," said Zugby.

She emerged unexpectedly, family members accompanying her as she made her way to the stage. "Where is she?" Zugby asked.

"There she is!" the audience cheered from the bleachers.

Joe Timer, vice-president of Greenbelt's Federal Credit Union and co-sponsor of the Outstanding Citizen Program, presented an official plaque to Hess, which recognized her for her dedication to helping the less fortunate in Greenbelt. Hess was also presented with a packet of gift certificates donated by local Greenbelt businesses and a T-shirt made from the Greenbelt Cooperative Nursery.

Hess was officially recognized as an Outstanding Citizen by the Mayor of Greenbelt, Emmett Jordan, in a proclamation from council.

In her remarks, Hess expressed her gratitude and delight at having her family with her.

"We grew up here in Greenbelt. We had a great time in Greenbelt, and all I can say is

Letters to the Editor

THANKS

Hours after the Labor Day Festival had closed, my exchange student and I walked over to the fairgrounds to see the crews packing up. When we saw the woman in charge, we thanked her for coming and told her how polite and friendly all of the employees were. She then looked at Ramona and said “I saw your picture in the Greenbelt News Review. You’re an exchange student from Germany.” I asked if she was from Greenbelt and she said that she was not but that she read our paper before she came. That says a lot about Sherwood Amusement!

Thanks also to Linda Ivy for another great Festival. Thanks to Public Works for keeping the place clean and neat.

Linda Curtis

Good old Greenbelt!

An open letter to Greenbelt Public Works:

I want to thank you and the city for some great fellows in your department.

It had been a full year and a half since I had fallen. I guess I got overconfident, which only means I was not 100 percent concentrating on mobility. A couple of weeks ago my thoughts must have been elsewhere and wham! Learned my lesson and hopefully won’t make that mistake again.

The heroes are Greenbelt’s Department of Public Works. I had run my Segway into a car parked far into the sidewalk, with its bumper against the concrete. I’ve only gone around such intrusions a zillion times with no problem. This time, not paying attention, I went flying, falling flat on my (helmeted) head, sprawled on the ground. A kind woman stopped and offered her cell phone. (I don’t know if she also was with the city.) I called the spouse.

A van pulled over. Some guys with Greenbelt work shirts jumped out. They offered to put my machine back in place, help me sit up, get to my feet and overall were quite comforting. (I asked the guys to check the car and they reported there was nary a scratch.) The leader of this Public Works’ crew is named Frank. I don’t know the names of his co-workers.

A huge shout out to them! It’s doubtful their job descriptions include helping people who make such dumb mistakes. I appreciate their coming to my rescue and please know you’ve some great folks on staff.

Elizabeth Gaines

Grateful!

The St. Hugh’s Church would like to thank all those who supported the bingo this past weekend. Through your support we raised over $7,000 to continue the efforts of the Ladies of Charity (food pantry, eviction prevention) and Youth Group/CYO activities. We would also like to thank the sponsors of the four “Blackout” Bingos: Ellen Hanyok, Kathy Labukas (in memory of Liz Labukas), Solange Hess, Councilmember Edward Putens and Helen White (in memory of Thomas X. White).

The new shade tents at bingo were a big hit with the community. The Festival Committee has approved more tents at bingo for next year.

THANKS

This was our first year as a Roosevelt Center merchant during Labor Day, and we wanted to do something to add to the fun. We came up with the idea of playing the Pixar Short cartoons from 11a.m. to 3 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday (the hottest, craziest part of both days) to give folks a place to take a break, cool off and recharge before going back for more Festival fun. We were thrilled with the response we got from everyone – it seems this will be a new yearly tradition.

We want to take this opportunity to thank the other Roosevelt Center merchants who helped make it possible: the Co-op Supermarket, David R. Cross, Attorney at Law, Generous Joe’s Deli, Greenbelt MakerSpace, Maria’s Beauty Salon, New Deal Café, Realty 1 – Leonard Wallace and Linda Ivy; Jane DeVane at Whole Health Wellness.

Having a great group of Roosevelt Center merchants working together is what made it a reality. We look forward to continuing cooperation in making the Center a year-round hub of Greenbelt life

Bus Service

Metro is proposing a number of changes to bus service in Greenbelt. A major improvement for Greenbelt is Sunday bus service. There are cuts in service as well. Please take time to review the proposed changes, attend the hearing and comment or e-mail your opinion. Our voice is very important. Although Sunday service is in the proposal, it doesn’t mean that it is guaranteed.

The hearing will be held Thursday, September 17, with an information session at 6 p.m. and public hearing at 6:30 p.m. The event will be held at Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority headquarters at 600 5th Street, NW in the District of Columbia.

Proposed changes include:

- Restructure the Greenbelt-New Carrollton Line (G12, G13, G14, GIG) into G12 and G14 only; cut service to Aerospace Road.

- Add G12, G14 Sunday service.

- Restructure the Greenbelt-Twinbrook Line (C2, C4). The C2 would run between the Takoma Langley Crossroads Transit Center and Greenbelt Station only.
- Add C2 Sunday service.

This would run between the Takoma Langley Crossroads Transit Center and Greenbelt Station only.

- On the College Park Line (81, 82, 83, 86) convert all 81 trips to 83 trips. This line would serve College Park Station 7 days a week; it would no longer serve Greenbelt Station on Sundays only.
- Eliminate the Greenbelt-Prince George’s Plaza Line (R3).

The public hearing docket is located at wmata.com/ as well as general information and the survey.

Himalayas, Germany Take Turns

Opening at Old Greenbelt Theatre on Friday, September 11 is Meru, taking turns with the already showing Phoenix (see previous On Screen for details). In the new film, three elite mountain climbers battle fearsome odds to reach the icy heights of Mount Meru in the Himalayas. Driven by fierce obsessions, the trio Conrad Aker, Renan Ozturk and film director Jimmy Chin are caught in “a meditation on life and death.” Along the unpredictable way the men praise the teachers whose experiences they drew on.

Safety Campaign Set for September

The Greenbelt Police Department will conduct three high-visibility campaigns during September to help ensure the safety of both drivers and pedestrians. Weekend patrols will look for impaired drivers. Daytime patrols, coinciding with the start of school, will focus on driving and pedestrian safety laws. Nighttime patrols will emphasize occupant protection laws by reminding motorists and passengers that safety belts and safety seats do indeed prevent injuries and save lives.

Kids’ School Supplies Sought for SHL School

The Greenbelt Federal Credit Union is collecting school supplies for Kids in Need at Springhill Lake Elementary School. A list of needed items is available online at pgcps.org/springhilllake/ as well as at the Credit Union and the Co-op Supermarket, both of which have drop boxes for donations. Cash donations can be made at the Credit Union; checks can be made payable to Springhill Lake Elementary School.

Ready 2 Read At Library

Helping families with young children to talk, sing, read, draw/write, play and learn together is the goal of the recently opened Ready 2 Read Center at the Greenbelt Library. This space gives very young children the opportunity to enjoy literacy-rich, hands-on experiences and activities, such as blocks, dramatic play and puzzles. As they engage children in play, parents and caregivers strengthen their role as the child’s first teacher and excite young minds to think creatively. An early literacy information display provides adults with ideas to take home and try. For more information, call 301-345-5800 or stop by the library at 11 Crescent Road.

GIVES Meets On Saturday

The Greenbelt Intergenerational Volunteer Exchange Service (GIVES) quarterly meeting will be held on Saturday, September 12, at 10 a.m. at the Community Center. It is particularly important because members will discuss the future of GIVES, which could become a non-profit organization.

New members are welcome to share their talents and desire to work with neighbors and to make Greenbelt a place that cares.

For further information, call Jean Cook at 301-345-2597.

Committee to Hold 2015 Open Forum

Saturday, September 26 is the date for this year’s annual open forum sponsored by the Greenbelt Senior Citizen Advisory Committee. It will be held at the Greenbelt Community Center in Room 201 from 1 to 3 p.m.

All are invited to share their concerns about issues in the community and get direct feedback from City officials, including representatives from Public Works, Planning, Greenbelt Police Department and elected officials. Positive comments are also welcome and appreciated. This event is not just for seniors.

Free Wine Tastings, New Look at Co-op

The Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket will offer a free wine-tasting event on Friday, September 11 from 4 to 7 p.m. led by resident wine expert John Mealey. As a special to all customers, all tasting wines will be available at $1 off their regular price. Other wine events during the month will be on September 18, 25 and 30.

Starting September 14 from 5 to 7 p.m. and continuing the second Monday of each month, the Co-op will begin a new program called Around the Co-op to explore one of the departments, aisles or new products.

Also highlighted will be some lesser known store services and samples or discounts when possible. Suggestions are always welcome too.

Toastmasters Meet

The Greenbelt Toastmasters Club will meet on Wednesday, September 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Social Hall of Greenbelt Community Church at Hillside and Crescent Roads.

Freda Lebowitz Wollman

Freda Lebowitz Wollman, born November 26, 1939, who resided on Eastway for the past 27 years and died on August 16, was raised in Prince George's county, growing up in Mount Ranier and then University Park. She graduated from Northwestern High School in 1957. She married in 1960, lived in the Lewisdale community in Hyattsville, and had a son and two daughters. Her son, Jerry Wollman, is now a hospital administrator in Baltimore. Her elder daughter, Iris Patillo, with her husband David, owns a construction management consulting firm near Atlanta. Her younger daughter, Marna, has just finished her master's degree in social work and will be transitioning from hospitality sales to a career as a psychotherapist.

Freda's five grandchildren, one girl and four boys, aged 23 down to 8, were a joy to her. After Freda's marriage ended amicably in the eighties, she met Billy Fletcher. As friends, lovers and soulmates, they lived a fun, full life until her death. One of Freda's biggest joys was being with her family. As her children were growing up they were proud to live in the fun and cool house where all the kids wanted to hang out. She always had a hug or a snack for any child that needed a place to just be themselves. She was open, non-judgmental and fun, treating the kids as real people and not as silly little children. Her home was always open on any holiday for those without another place to go. There was always room at the Wollman's table, as she was always generous. Freda was a loyal and dedicated employee working for one company in the automotive parts sales industry for over 25 years and another for over five years until her retirement nine years ago. She and Billy enjoyed canoeing and fishing in their earlier years together. Even in retirement, Freda wanted to stay busy helping people. Another joy was the work that she did as a volunteer at Doctors Community Hospital. She was there for eight years.

It was said by co-workers and others that she was one of their most dedicated volunteers. When she was diagnosed with emphysema over a decade ago she quit smoking. But the damage had been done and her weakened lung capacity took its toll on her body over the years. She gradually slowed down and lost her ability to get around with ease. Even with her illness, she continued to help and support many projects over the years, like Ronald McDonald House, Children's Hospital and cystic fibrosis to name a few. After falling and breaking her pelvic bone in May she fought hard all summer to recuperate. The visitors, notes, cards and flower that she received all summer long were a testament to the number of people that she had an impact on throughout her life. Freda was one of a kind and her love touched many. Her Shiva services, held at the home of her son in Silver Spring on August 18 and 19, were a beautiful celebration of her life. You know you're a special person when your doctor attends your service as well as the nurses who cared for you at the end of your life. Even in dying, she taught us all a lot about living. A loving friend's tribute.

Our condolences to the family and friends of Robert Bassett, who died August 28 after playing tennis. Sympathies to the family and friends of Freda Lebowitz Wollman who was a longtime resident of Prince Georges County and a 27-year Greenbelter. She died August 16. Liz Labukas was buried at Arlington National Cemetery on September 3, beside her parents Peter and Eileen Labukas. Liz always loved the Labor Day Festival which takes place every year near her birthday, September 5, especially playing bingo and helping to carry the Nursery School banner in the parade. She was remembered at the bingo this past Saturday night by a special blackout bingo her sister Kathy sponsored in her honor. A Kousa dogwood tree will be planted in her memory sometime later this fall near the Nursery School, where she worked for many years. Doug and Lannay Tull are proud to announce the following news on their two daughters. Jacqueline Tull Willoughby has been awarded a full scholarship to pursue a Master of Fine Arts degree at the University of Delaware. Jacque received a Bachelor of Fine Arts degree summa cum laude from the Pennsylvania College of Art and Design in May. Corinne Tull has begun her new job as a special education teacher at Frances Fuchs Early Childhood Center in Beltsville following receipt of her Bachelor of Science degree in early childhood special education from Towson University in May. Congratulations to: Brothers Mike and John Culhane, both graduates of Catholic University, who will be appearing together on stage for the first time in Prince George's Little Theatre's production of Once Upon a Mattress. The musical comedy opens on Friday, September 11 at the Bowie Playhouse in White Marsh Park, Bowie. Mike stars as Prince Dauntless and John portrays Sir Harry. HESS continued from page 1 that Greenbelt is Great. I do want the young people to remember to love your parents and your teachers fond and dear,” said Hess.

After the ceremony, Hess and former Outstanding Citizens gathered in the Council Room in the Municipal Building for the traditional celebratory cake and punch. Jordan presented Hess with a small model of the Mother and Child statue in Roosevelt Center.

“Solange exemplifies a lot of the best qualities the Outstanding Citizen Committee is looking for,” Jordan said.

Background

Hess was born and grew up in Winnipeg, Canada, on the banks of the Red River. Her passion for volunteering, she said, comes from being a child of the Great Depression.

“The sense of volunteering started in my family way back when. It all started at home. We always had to give back and share. We always had little to give and little to share.”

Hess’s father worked as a physician and her mother volunteered as a nurse in the local hospital. Growing up in a family of medical professionals, Hess developed a calling for nursing. She enrolled in nursing school at St. Joseph’s Academy and College, and went on to continue her studies at nursing school at Misericordia Hospital in Manitoba.

She became a nurse shortly afterward and worked for 55 years in the profession.

Motivated by her desire to gain more nursing experience in the field of psychiatry, Hess decided to move to the United States for the first time to work at the Menninger Clinic in Kansas. She later traveled to Alaska, where she met and fell in love with her husband.

Activities

Despite living a busy life of a mother of three boys, Hess still found time to be energetically involved in youth organizations. She was a volunteer for the Greenbelt Little League and the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Tennis Team.

Her involvement in the community is broad and extends to different organizations in the community. She is an active member in a variety of clubs, such as the Greenbelt Golden Age Club, and is also a member of the Greenbelt News Review’s proofreading team. Hess is certified in Emergency Preparedness and volunteers in Greenbelt’s Community Emergency Response Team. Her nurse certification also qualifies her to perform blood screenings for the Heart Association and city-sponsored health fairs.

Hess’s work goes beyond volunteering; she also helps develop poverty alleviation programs, such as the Greenbelt Assistance in Living Program, also known as GAIL. She is an active parishioner and member of the Ladies of Charity in St. Hugh of Grenoble. For eight years Hess has been coordinator for the Pantry of Greenbelt—an ecumenical program that provides groceries confidentially to underprivileged families in Greenbelt sustained solely by donations and the generosity of the community. The Pantry serves fifteen families a week.

The Ladies of Charity obtain most of their donations from shoppers at the Greenbelt Co-op who drop off foodstuffs in a green bin labeled “Food Pantry Donations.” Volunteers pick up the groceries once a week and bring them to St. Hugh of Grenoble, where the Ladies of Charity organize the groceries and package them into meals.

When asked to describe what was her most gratifying experience as a volunteer, Solange Hess simply responded: “It is better to give than to receive.”

“I’ve met up with such generous people they have been so wonderful. We have kept this alive, even though we have no source of income. It’s the generosity of the people of Greenbelt that has sustained me and the members of the pantry,” Hess said.

Transportation Planning Board Community Leadership Institute

How are transportation decisions made in this region? How can community leaders make a difference?

The Transportation Planning Board’s (TPB) Community Leadership Institute (CLI) is designed to help community leaders figure out those questions. Over the course of three interrelated modules, the CLI aims to empower individuals to get involved in transportation decision-making whenever and where ever it occurs. Facilitated by Kathy Porter—current WMATA board member and former TPB chair and Takoma Park Mayor—the CLI uses interactive group exercises and discussions to help participants better understand regional challenges as well as opportunities for successful public involvement. At each step of the way, participants discuss ways in which the interests of their local communities connect with the planning issues facing the entire region. By providing this big-picture context, the CLI encourages participants to “think regionally and act locally.”

Interested candidates must commit to attending all three sessions: Wednesday evenings from 5:30 to 9 p.m. on October 7, 10 and 14 at the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments offices in Washington, D.C. Interested candidates must submit a brief statement of interest before September 25, 2015.

The statement of interest can either be submitted online (www.mwcog.org/cli) or by sending an email to Bryan Hayes (bhayes@mwccog.org) and must include the following information:

Name, state of residence, mailing address affiliation with a civic association or community group, recent experiences or roles in community leadership, why you are interested in participating in the TPB Community Leadership Institute one how you heard about the CLI.

Also write a one-to-two sentence bio to be shared with other members of the CLI.

statements of interest may also be mailed to:

Bryan Hayes, Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments, 777 North Capital Street, NE Suite 300, Washington, DC 20002

A member of the TPB staff will contact those who submit a statement of interest regarding registration status.

CLI participants represent a range of transportation interests and come from all corners of the metropolitan Washington region. For the CLI to be successful, it is important for participants to comprise a comprehensive group that is representative of the mosaic of interests and geographical diversity within our region. The TPB hosts the CLI multiple times annually, so if interested parties are unable to attend the CLI this fall, future opportunities will be available.

For more information on the CLI, visit mwccog.org/cli or contact Bryan Hayes at 202-962-3273 or bhayes@mwccog.org.

Greenbelt, Maryland, is a Hotbed of Everyday Climate Change Action

by Kelsey Ryan

For many people today, the environmental movement can seem intimidating. Climate change is scary, as are environmental inequality, pollution, and waste. What can one person do to change these realities?

But for one resident of Greenbelt, Maryland, there's one important way the "green" movement can seem more friendly: encouragement.

"It's good to explain environmental issues on a basic level," says Jane Young. Young is a longtime Greenbelt local and a coordinator of the Greenbelt Wind Group, a collaborative effort by the Greenbelt Community Church, the Greenbelt Climate Action Network (or GCAN), and other environmentally-focused groups around the city.

Early this August, we at Groundswell got the opportunity to take a special tour of Greenbelt, hosted by Young. And along the way, she told us the story of her journey to clean energy, and Greenbelt's success in making environmentalism something everyone can access.

"It's really important that we be stewards of the Earth, but 'being green' is hard for many people, especially older people, to wrap their heads around," says Young. "Even in Greenbelt—which is a green community—a lot of people still don't understand what to do or how."

The key to making real change, thinks Young, is making environmentalism part of daily life. "Some people recycle already, and that's great," she says. "But then you see people who won't recycle, but they garden. That's also good thing, probably even better than just recycling. We've got to help people see why the Earth is important, and all the ways they can easily participate."

Mass Casualty Drill On September 12

The first-ever local, multi-municipality evening mass casualty drill will take place on the evening of Saturday, September 12 at the Berwyn Heights Elementary School, where Community Emergency Response Teams (CERT) from Berwyn Heights, Laurel and Greenbelt will jointly respond to a disaster scenario.

CERT volunteers will practice disaster response procedures including search and rescue, mass casualty care and a full deployment of emergency assets as they locate, triage and treat casualties.

The three municipalities have a long history of cooperation and training together, and it is understood that in any real life disaster they may be called upon to help each other. An important feature of this exercise is that the drill is not encumbering major municipal government resources or management. Instead, the operation is being staffed and managed by organized and trained citizen volunteer CERT groups dedicated to first response capabilities.

Persons wishing to participate in this exercise either as a rescuer or a victim/survivor are urged to go to eventbrite.com/e/mass-casualty-certex-berwyn-heights-2015-tickets-18039171648?aff=es2 to register. For more information write to Berwyn.heights.certs@hotmail.com.

Although small changes don't do much on their own, they can help people start on a journey towards more sustainable lives. Could starting to recycle help someone one day to decide to put solar panels on their house?

"I've been on a recycling kick lately," says Young. "That's not because it's the most important thing to do for the environment, but it's an easy first step. I can't get everybody to switch over to solar or wind, but recycling is something everybody can do every day. And you'd be surprised at how few people actually recycle."

That's where encouragement comes in. What Young has learned in her time as an environmentalist in Greenbelt is that communities take stronger action when they work together—and to Young, that means being a cheerleader for the green movement. "When people in our community do something positive and we encourage them, they may keep taking more actions," says Young. Like with this year's Greenbelt Labor Day Festival, coming up this September. One thing GCAN is doing is hosting games about environmental issues. They'll be really easy, and we'll have simple prizes so everyone can win. Then with the trash bins, we're going to have them paired with recycling containers."

"In the church, it's really important that we be stewards of the Earth, but "being green" is hard for many people, especially older people, to wrap their heads around," says Jane Young, a member of the Greenbelt Climate Action Network.

These may seem basic, but to Young, "small steps add up."

On our tour of Greenbelt, we first stopped by the Greenbelt Community Church (GCC). Young has been a member of GCC for 40 years, and has been a part of many initiatives to make the church more eco-friendly.

Young also showed us parts of downtown Greenbelt, including the New Deal Café, a local restaurant and community gathering spot.

Thanks so much for giving us the chance to see how Greenbelt makes action on the environment an everyday community activity, Jane! We're so thankful for communities like yours, and individuals like you.

From Beirut to Greenbelt; Salehs Find Connection Here

by Jim Link

Anwar and Amal Saleh have been making Greenbelters (more) beautiful and stylish for almost 20 years in their Haven of Beauty, Palace of Style or, more mundanely, Greenbelt Barber and Stylist Hair Salon.

Looking spiffy and chic, customers have been leaving 151 Centerway, adjacent to Greenbelt Auto and Truck Repair, diagonally opposite the Greenbelt Grocery Co-op, since 1996, quite satisfied.

Anwar and Amal Saleh outside their shop, Greenbelt Barber and Stylist Hair Salon.

Don't take my word for it, google their emporium to read a fistful of positive reviews.

Anwar and Amal decided to emigrate from Beirut to the USA in 1990 toward the end of the civil war. Sectarian and political violence among Shi'a, Sunni, Maronite, Palestinian and Israeli factions made life in Beirut unpalatable, to put it euphemistically.

A brother in Beltsville, also a barber, welcomed them so that "we could look for a better life," Anwar said. And they found it, or more precisely, forged it in Greenbelt. "We love it here. We have a connection with our clients. We are like family," claimed Amal.

"We like Greenbelt very much," said Anwar more sedately. Over the years they brought two children into the world. Son Aiman, now 29, has a degree in biology and physiology from the University of Maryland and is a doctor at the American University in Beirut. A droll or noble historic irony? It's no stretch to say Aiman's parents left a wounded land and that Aiman has returned to help heal it.

Daughter Rola, 22, graduated this past May from University of Maryland with a double major in political science and Arabic.

Anwar met Amal when he was working on a road construction crew in her neighborhood and noticed her walking by daily. He eventually gathered his courage to the sticking point and engaged her in conversation. Courtship ensued.

As a 10 year old, Anwar was a fanatical soccer player, but his talent didn't match his desire, he recalls wistfully, so active playing has faded into fond memory.

He is happy to say that Amal is a wonderful cook, not a culinary patzer like himself. So traditional Lebanese fare tabouli, hummus, baba ghanoush graces their dining room table regularly. They both are big fans of Chef Karim's Lebanese delicacies at the New Deal Café.

Living proof of the warmth, energy, cultural diversity and benevolent community contribution that immigrant citizens can bring, Anwar and Amal assure me that their affection for Greenbelt and their clientele is "from the heart."

Greenbelt Blues Festival Honors King of the Blues

by Chris Logan

The Greenbelt 13th Annual Blues Festival is tuning up with lots of activities. In addition to terrific live music, this year’s festival is dedicated to the memory of the “King of the Blues,” BB King. In honor of BB King, there will be two free showings of BB King’s life story, The Life of Riley at Beltway Plaza, Academy 8 Stadium Theaters (Wednesday, September 16 at 7 p.m.) and at the Old Greenbelt Theatre (Saturday, September 19 at 7:30 p.m.). The movie, narrated by Morgan Freeman, has received many accolades.

Following the showing on Saturday, there may be a discussion with a member of the DC Blues Society about the movie and the music. During the live music events, the performers will speak about how BB King influenced their music. BB King died on May 14, 2015 from complications caused by diabetes which he had had for over 25 years. Information about the disease and its prevention will be available at events.

The live music begins on Friday, September 18 from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Beltway Plaza Mall. Kevin Robinson will play his magical cordless guitar at the corridor hub (Center Court) intersection by the entrance to Academy 8 Stadium Theaters. On Saturday, September 19, the music continues at the outdoor stage in Greenbelt’s historic Roosevelt Center from 1 to 7 p.m. and indoors from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. in the New Deal Café.

Council was also told by staff that Charlestowne Village has approved Pepco’s proposals within its area, the affected area of Lastner Lane was approved by all but one homeowner, two residents on Maplewood Court oppose the proposed removal of four Bradford pears in front of their homes and Greenbelt Homes, Incorporated, where extensive work is proposed, is still reviewing that work request.

Complaints

Mayor Emmett Jordan expressed disappointment that Pepco had not furnished a requested map showing all the work proposed to be done in the city instead of the multiple plans. He also noted the difficulty the city had responding quickly to Pepco’s request for approval because it was summertime and many people involved or affected were on vacation.

Pasternak said that Pepco’s power grid is not based upon municipal boundaries and that the seven plans were based upon the location of feeder lines to be worked upon. In an email to McLaughlin he also said that “trying to condense the wide geographic area covered by seven maps into one map that contains all the proposed work on city property would essentially yield a useless, unidentifiable blob.”

Councilmember Judith Davis complained about the “tone of emails” sent by Pepco. She considered Pepco to be strong-arming the council and citizens. Pasternak apologized for the time constraints. Pepco wanted people to be aware that either yes or no answers were needed soon in order for the work to be scheduled. Near approval for five plans was fine, but most of the work to be done is depicted in the two plans still pending. There is still a need to finalize the plan in accordance with city responses and to line up contractors to do the work which should be done between now and December.

Homeowners Complaints

Later in the meeting, Derek Thompson, representing the Windsor Green Homeowners Association (WGHOA), also complained that Pepco did not know “how to deal with homeowners.” He noted that this was the second time in three years that Pepco had proposed work in Windsor Green. In a memorandum to the city he reported that WGHOA was first made aware of the current work proposal on June 10. Pepco was invited to an association meeting on June 15 where the residents were told that a response was needed by June 30. He believes that Pepco “misunderstood the slow and deliberative response by which the HOA normally deals with issues affecting homeowners.”

This was similar to what took place when Pepco made its earlier request and it was only when the residents met with a Pepco arborist that the issues were resolved. However, he objected to replacement trees being planted in December, which he believed resulted in 36 of them having to be replaced.

Both city Horticulturist Brian Townsend and Ethel Dutky, a plant pathologist who is a member of the city’s Advisory Committee on Trees, disagreed that those trees had been planted at the wrong time with Dutky saying that spring was absolutely the worst time to plant trees because they don’t have enough time to set their roots before the summer heat and drought take place.

Trimming?

Councilmember Rodney Roberts opposed cutting down any trees, advocating that they instead be trimmed to 15 feet from wires. Dutky disagreed, saying that many trimmed trees develop trunk defects, and she didn’t want the city to have dangerous trees.

Townsend said that this was especially true of maples and that trimming can result in dieback and decay to trunks.

It was also noted that many of the trees affected were old Bradford pears and that these trees drop branches with age and become hazardous to cars and people.

Dutky said that they had looked at 154 trees identified by Pepco and found that 104 should be removed. Another 18 needed to be trimmed.

Roberts expressed concern about the impact of these removals on the tree canopy and asked what percentage would be affected. Dutky noted that rough estimates of the city tree canopies were based upon aerial photos and that it would be impossible to get the detailed percentages Roberts sought. She said that it was important to have excellent quality trees and she advocated the city have a tree replacement policy similar to that of Calvert County.

Tree Study

City Manager Michael McLaughlin said the city needed to know where tree planting was appropriate and that it was a staff plan to undertake a tree study.

Thompson wanted to know what trees removed by Pepco would be replaced and Pasternak said all that were requested.

Davis thought it would be better for the city to negotiate a replacement cost with Pepco and do it itself, but Dutky said that the trees offered by Pepco were of good quality and should be accepted.

She also provided council with a list of acceptable replacement trees for under power lines prepared by the tree committee. The important thing, Dutky said, was to water the new trees regularly for three years; it would take that long for the root systems to become well established.

There Is Some Rosenwald Inside Every One of Us

by Cara Snyder

Community High School, Lakeland (Prince George’s County), is an example of the six-teacher, six-classroom school, one of at least 27 Rosenwald schools built in Prince George’s County.

The Old Greenbelt Theatre’s sold-out first screening of the documentary film Rosenwald and Q&A session with director Aviva Kempner and research historian Susan G. Pearl took place on Tuesday, September 1. Kempner’s 12 year old project is an impressive feat; she manages to encapsulate business philosophy, biography, and most importantly, rich yet unexplored African American history, all in a 90 minute film. I walked away from the event with three powerful takeaways: the legacy of the Julius Rosenwald schools is alive and thriving in Prince George’s County, history matters and we all have some Rosenwald (JR as the down-to-earth Sears and Roebuck chief executive officer preferred to be called) inside of us.

To understand the legacy of the schools here in our backyard, Pearl started with the basic numbers – there were over 5,300 schools built in 15 Southern states. In Maryland, which was also a Jim Crow state, there were 156 Rosenwald institutions, 27 of which were in Prince Georges County and nine that are still standing today.

Benny Larson was the first audience member to stand during the Q&A and share that he attended one of those schools and that his mother was a teacher. After that, the floodgates opened, and at least 30 audience members testified that they, too, had been touched by the schools. Graduates of Lakeland Elementary near College Park (who have written a book on their school’s history) and Lincoln in Lanham, to name two, stood to speak and to be recognized.

The screening’s multi-racial representation and dialogue was a refreshing reminder to a majority-white Old Greenbelt that black history is everyone’s history, and much of this past is alive and relevant.

History as Kempner repeated throughout the night matters. In fact, “history matters” is the slogan on the back of her “Rosenwald” T-shirt. This message pulses through the film, which is as much African American history as it is a biography of Julius Rosenwald.

The second half of the film details the black artists and intellectuals who benefited from the Rosenwald fund (which community member Stanley Edwards called a MacArthur precursor). Here Kempner names numerous renowned African American dancers, sculptors, painters and authors and flashes images of them and their works.

Sadly, most were names I had never heard before. Others, more famous beneficiaries such as Jacob Lawrence, Augusta Savage and Langston Hughes, received detailed profiles. One profile featured Marian Anderson, and this film was my introduction to the gifted contralto, confirming Kempner’s assertion that many young people are suffering from a serious deficit of historical knowledge.

Such historical amnesia has grave consequences. For instance, how can voters of my generation (and younger) understand the gravity of attacks against the Voting Rights Act if we don’t know the events surrounding that still-necessary piece of legislation? Films such as Eva Duvernay’s “Selma,” and now Kempner’s “Rosenwald” are crucial interventions in American History.

In addition to Kempner’s focus on History, she used the opportunity of the Q&A to assert that “we all have some JR in us”. By this she means that everyone has the capacity to care and to act, even if they are not backed by millions of dollars. Being rich, according to the billionaire, is a matter of luck.

In fact, in one of the Greenbelt theater crowd’s favorite scenes, Rosenwald critiques American’s obsession with the rich and asserts that rich people are not smarter; in fact, “there is ample evidence to the contrary.”

But what makes some rich people generous philanthropists? Why did JR give aid to people he had no personal interest in helping? Kempner’s thesis is that Rosenwald’s philanthropy is due to a combination of factors: the early influence of his childhood neighbors, the Lincolns (yes, as in Abraham Lincoln); his mother’s guidance; Jewish ideals of tzedakah (charity) and tikkun olam (repairing the world); his friendship with progressive Rabbi Emil Hersh; and his relationship with Booker T. Washington and Tuskegee University.

No matter our personal experiences, no matter the sums in our bank accounts, we have the capacity to act. Kempner’s message bears repeating: we are all capable of the radical generosity and love that Julius Rosenwald modeled.

In Memoriam Robert Bassett, Greenbelt Tennis Legend, Dies on Court

Robert (“Bobby”) Bassett, a long-time member of the Greenbelt Tennis Association and four-day a week player at Braden Field, died on Friday, August 28, 2015, at age 65. He was born on December 7, 1949 and died as he lived – on the tennis court – and after winning a doubles match.

I had the pleasure of knowing Bobby for nearly 20 years. Bobby, the late Al Hargrave, Jim Badini and this reporter were the early birds at Braden Field, playing before anyone else was around. Bobby was the first tennis player I ever met who “talked trash” on the court – but in a wholly inoffensive way. For example, whenever someone congratulated him on making a good shot, his standard response was “it was just that easy.” I often said “just say thank you, Bobby”, but that wasn’t his style. Although in his prime he had excellent tennis skills, he would ease up on his shots when playing less talented opponents.

But Bobby was much more than a tennis player. He was also a talented photographer who loved nature and reveled in getting great shots of landscape, animals and especially flowers. He won several prizes for photography at the annual Labor Day Festival, including this year, where his photograph of purple cone flowers won first place in the Flower category and second place as the Community Favorite, based on votes from those who attended the photographic displays.

During the presentation of Bobby’s award on September 7, Keith Zevallos, vice-president of the photo show, noted that Bobby was a “gentle soul” who was always the first contestant to submit his photographs. Although most of his tennis friends did not see the gentle-soul-side of Bobby’s personality during his matches, the fact that it came out during his artistic endeavors bespeaks of his complexity.

Finally, Bobby was a loving father and grandfather. He had two daughters, Gerri Bassett Tennyson and Kristal Bassett Posada and three grandchildren, Dwight Tennyson, Jr., Taylor Tennyson and Reina Marie Posada Bassett. Although Bobby was a private person, he never made a secret of how proud he was of his progeny.

A service was held at Pope Funeral Home’s Forestville Chapel on September 3, where friends and relatives expressed their joy in knowing Bobby. The Greenbelt tennis and arts community shares that joy – and sorrow.

Walter H. Hanley

Walter H. Hanley, 82, died peacefully at Charlotte Hall Veterans Home on August 22, 2015. He was born December 29, 1932 in New York City. He grew up in Burlington, Vermont, as the only child of Walter Haines Hanley and Mary Duff. He joined the U.S. Army and served three years in Fort Dix, N.J. during the Korean War.

He moved to the Washington, D.C. area to work as a typist for the FBI. Later he joined the Bank Board of Examiners. As an examiner, he traveled extensively.

Walter started as a volunteer in the Emergency Room of Doctors Community Hospital. When they hired him as an ER Tech, he resigned from the Bank Board. He started in the nursing program at Prince George’s Community College and graduated in 1984 with his AA in Nursing. He was working as an R.N. when he suffered a stroke in 1987. He retired at that time, but came back for five years as a hospital volunteer.

Walter’s disability from the stroke did not keep him from enjoying life. Despite his speech difficulties, he traveled alone by train or plane. His favorite trips were to the New England area and Canada. He spent many happy hours at Generous Joe’s and the New Deal Café, drinking Coca Cola and telling people he was “poor and had no money.” He was a successful player at the slots in Atlantic City. He had no surviving family but many friends, with happy memories of their time together.

Walter was a member of St. Hugh’s church. His funeral mass will be held there on Saturday, September 19, at 11 a.m., with a reception to follow in Grenoble Hall. Interment with full military honors will take place Monday, September 21 at 11 a.m. at the Maryland Veterans Cemetery in Cheltenham, Md.

HCDC Proposal

At tonight’s meeting, Eisenberg returned to present a more formal proposal to work with the city. As it turned out, councilmembers were sufficiently impressed with the proposal that they invited him to make a presentation at the September 28 regular council meeting in order to share it with city residents. It was tentatively agreed that this presentation would be placed on the agenda.

One driving force for asking Eisenberg to present again was a concern raised later in the meeting that the council may not have adequately conveyed to Greenbelt residents why there is a need for undertaking economic development programs in the city.

The proposal is divided into three sections: the development of web-based informational tools to assist residents and businesses, while also signaling the city’s intent to be a business-supportive community; analysis of what types of programs the city might undertake and what county and state resources the city should take advantage of; and steps to take toward implementing the recommendations made by the Sage Policy Group.

Most councilmembers agreed that the first two parts of the proposal were quite workable and useful. It was also thought that part two would inform part three. The third part, however, they thought would need more discussion before they would be in sufficient agreement to consider it. Councilmember Edward Putens commented, “We need to do our job first.”

An interesting aspect of the proposal is that it explicitly involves expectations of city staff involvement and participation throughout, so that the project is implemented in collaboration with the city, rather than simply being done for the city.

Toolkit

The first part of the proposal deals with developing a website business guide for residents and visitors that would be linked to a map as well as to the businesses’ own websites and have search and filter capabilities. Printed versions can also be made available for various purposes.

Councilmember Judith Davis said this type of information is just what is needed but she raised a caution that came up several times during the presentation: that council needed to be aware of staffing implications.

Eisenberg agreed that the city should plug that concern into its evaluation of the plan but pointed out that government receives information on businesses coming and going all the time through its finance and planning departments and should be harnessing this information to benefit residents and the businesses. Once set up, he said, the updating should be a clerical function, most desirably being made on the website without a need for code.

Other parts of the “toolkit” include a business property database and customized public maps. Two guides, one to starting a business in Greenbelt, the other to navigating city and county code requirements, would be developed, with the goal of making the process of opening a business in Greenbelt as transparent and painless as possible. In response to a question from Councilmember Konrad Herling, Eisenberg stressed that the audience for these materials was not developers but rather businesses forming or locating in the city.

Analysis

The second part of the proposal, called the competitive and collaborative analysis, Eisenberg identified as being the most important component of the project. During this segment the city would be evaluated as a whole, assessing its value as a place to live or to conduct business, as a way to determine how the city should be promoted. An inventory of economic development tools used successfully in this area by the county and municipalities would be presented and recommendations would be made on what programs would best serve Greenbelt’s goals.

The third part would lay out specific steps for implementing each of the Sage Policy Group’s recommendations that the city wants to pursue.

Goal Setting

When Eisenberg presented at the meeting in June, he emphasized the need for the city to determine what its goals are with regard to economic development. It appears that more time will be needed for councilmembers to come to a meeting of the minds in this area. In aid of his first presentation, Eisenberg distributed a questionnaire to all councilmembers to find out what their goals were but received only four responses from the seven. At the August meeting Eisenberg said that he now has received five.

Resident Understanding

Davis was concerned that too many residents may not understand what economic development programs are designed to accomplish. She had received comments from people who thought the council wanted to turn Greenbelt into another College Park or Hyattsville. Davis stressed that the city needed to convey that the goal was not to change Greenbelt in significant ways, but rather to keep and improve Greenbelt as a vital place to live and do business. She added that the city cannot simply do nothing when 30 percent of its office space is sitting vacant.

Councilmember Konrad Herling agreed, saying that council must convey the benefit to residents in having healthy businesses in the city. Eisenberg added that businesses are largely responsible for the quality of life in a community. Jordan has often commented on the need for a strong commercial tax base to keep residential taxes in line while maintaining good services and shopping for residents.

Councilmember Rodney Roberts took issue with the idea that Greenbelt is not thriving. His opinion was that Greenbelt is not only thriving but has one of the strongest economies in the state and does not need to make any changes. Marc Kapastin, representing the Greenbelt Community Development Corporation (GCDC), disagreed, citing significantly lower income per square foot for business property in Greenbelt. It appeared that no one else on the city council agreed with Roberts either.

In addition to the presentation at the regular council meeting on Monday, September 28, Barbara Simon, president of GCDC, announced that those wanting to learn more about economic development in Greenbelt have another opportunity on Sunday, October 4. GCDC will host a forum on the subject from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Old Greenbelt Theatre. Simon and Kapastin co-chair the forum committee.

DEFEND CHILD'S HEARING

1. If after exposure to loud sound at any musical event your fetus-infant-child-adolescent is experiencing any unusual body movements or hearing discomfort or distortion it would be best to see a doctor or get his or her hearing tested right away. Usually symptoms will pass within days or weeks, but damage may develop and remain.
2. I suggest the audiologists at U of MD HESP (Hearing and Speech Dept)
3. If you are into alternative or complementary medicine choose ASAP some foods for your child that have sufficient or ample magnesium. Ask your doctor.
4. It's easy to check all of this on the Internet.

GAFC Celebrates Legendary
Member Irene Fulton Pavlish

by Jeri Holloway

Irene Pavlish celebrates her birthday at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center on August 28.

Irene Fulton Pavlish gathered with her Aquacize Class members, family and friends on Friday, August 28 to celebrate her 88th birthday at the Greenbelt Aquatic and Fitness Center (GAFC). Irene has participated in the 8 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday classes since the indoor pool opened in 1991, and has traditionally been the one to honor class member birthdays with her special homemade cakes. This year, as illness has kept her away from the pool, the cake and party were provided by current and former class members at the GAFC.

Born on August 28, 1927 and raised in Kansas, Irene is a woman of sturdy stock: a person of great determination, hard work, family dedication and one with strong opinions about any local and world event. She came to Greenbelt as a newlywed with her husband Lee Fulton in 1946 and lived in homes on Laurel Hill Road, Ridge Road, Lastner Lane and currently again on Ridge Road. Her four children were all born and raised in Greenbelt. Two children, Joe and Linda, still live nearby while oldest son John lives in Oregon. Irene has continued to live a wonderful life after losing two husbands (Lee Fulton and Charlie Pavlish) and her daughter Nancy. [She has been a member of the Greenbelt Community Church since its beginnings in the early 1950s.]

Many remember Irene from the Greenbelt Co-op Grocery, where she worked as a checker from 1946 until 1985. (Irene finally retired at age 75 after a 16-year career at the Government Printing Office.) There were some breaks in her job at the Co-op as she raised her family but her enthusiasm for fitness began at home with her children as they exercised with Jack LaLanne on TV. She participated in fitness programs throughout the area before discovering her love for water aerobics at the new GAFC in 1991. Her fear of water disappeared as she enthusiastically embraced the joy of the pool with so many of her new and old friends. Happy Birthday, Irene! We admire your wonderful gift of gab and your enthusiasm for food, friends, family and a good book.

Greenbelt Labor Day Festival 2015!

It was a hot time in the old town. Residents from all parts of Greenbelt and beyond came for three and a half days of sun, rides, food, and music. Here are a few quick highlights. More stories to come in following weeks.

The Greenbelt Elementary School PTA's book sale had a bumper year, raising close to $15,000.

With belly dancers and singers, the New Deal Café took best in the parade after shimmying down the road.
